

West Babylon School District Selects KENWOOD NEXEDGE® DMR Radios for Expanded Coverage

PROJECT OVERVIEW: The West Babylon School District on Long Island needed to upgrade their analog radios to digital. With KENWOOD DMR radios, they could add the valuable features of digital radios, supplementing and enhancing their analog system during the transition.

The city of West Babylon is in Suffolk County on Long Island, 32 miles east of New York City. Established in 1872, it counts American poet Walt Whitman among its famous residents. The West Babylon School District covers more than eight square miles, employs more than 750 people and serves 3,757 students in its high school, middle school and five primary schools. The district ranks in the top 50% in the state for reading and math skills and has a graduation rate of 89%.

“We have all noticed and appreciated the change in voice quality. The signal is clearer. We are able to communicate further.”

— Edwin Salas, Director of Security for the West Babylon School District
